ALLIES KEEP UP DAY, NIGHT AIR ATTACKS

Quiet Broadcasts in Paris, Luxembourg and Denmark.

By The Associated Press

LONDON, April 20—The Luxembourg and Paris radios went off the air shortly after noon today, it was reported, indicating that Allied bombers might be observing Adolf Hitler's 54th birthday by a renewal of bombing of European targets.

The main Danish radio station at Kalundborg also went off the air at 12:30 p. m.

Allied light bombers and fighters struck again last night at the railroads serving German transport systems over a big stretch of occupied Europe and Germany.

Rail Lines Attacked

The air ministry news service said that the RAF's lighter ships ranged against Nazi rail lines and roads from Brittany, through northern France and Holland, and into northwestern Germany, and Typhoon and Whirlwind bombers attacked shipping in the channel.

Two aircraft were missing from the night's missions, the news service said.

(The Berlin radio, in a broadcast recorded by The Associated Press said that four enemy bombers which struck at Holland and northwestern Germany last night were shot down and that a fifth crashed into the channel.

Britain, meanwhile, enjoyed a raidless night.

A Reuters' report from its correspondent in Zurich, Switzerland, said that about 300 persons were killed in the RAF's massive raid Friday night on the Skoda works at Pilsen, in German-occupied Czechoslovakia.

Plant Knocked Out

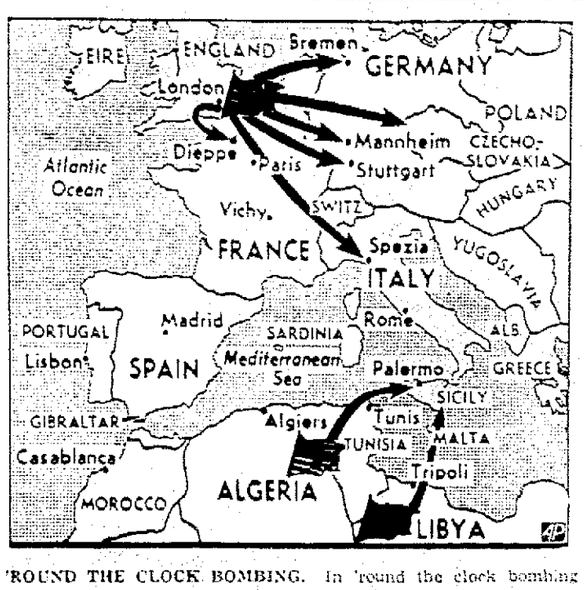
Testimony to the utter destruction sown by the royal air force bombers in the operation, described by the air ministry as the biggest night raid of the year when coupled with the simultaneous attacks on Ludwigshaven and Manheim, was given in the report, which said that everything within an area of 50 acres appears to have been destroyed.

German experts, it was said, estimated it would take from three to five months to get the Skoda works running again, and then only on a restricted scale.

Mosquito bombers attacked railway targets in Belgium last night and fighter planes lashed at transport targets and a power station in northern France yesterday morning, the air ministry said.

The Germans, meanwhile, were reported to have stepped up their reconnaissance by day and night, an indication they are attempting to keep close watch on invasion preparations in Britain.



'ROUND THE CLOCK BOMBING. In 'round the clock bombing of axis military objectives and arms plants on the European continent, British-based planes pounded Spezia in northern Italy, after U. S. bombers from North Africa blasted Palermo, Sicily, and battered shipping in the Mediterranean. British bombers of the desert air force also struck at Catania, Sicily. Recent allied targets included Stuttgart, Mannheim, and Bremen in Germany, and Pilsen in German-occupied Czecho-Slovakia.

FIGHT SECRET FOOD PARLEYS

Senators Continue To Insist That Public Be Informed on Talks.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, April 20—A senatorial demand for open sessions at the forthcoming international food conference was coupled today with the assertion if the deliberations at such a meeting must be kept from the American people, it has been called too soon.

Elsewhere on Capitol Hill, the house appeared poised to liquidate the farm security administration—although the senate has yet to act—and a behind-the-scenes "last stand" compromise attempt for some pay-as-you-go legislation featured abatement of half of one year's income taxes.

Meanwhile, another reason why black market meat shouldn't be bought came from the office of war information—which said bootleg butchering robs service men of potential surgical and medical aids derived from the by-products of legitimate slaughtering.

Senator George (D-Ga.) told reporters he felt present arrangements barring the press from contact with delegates and from attending any but formal opening and closing sessions of the May food conference at Hot Springs, Va., "cannot but have a bad effect on American opinion."

In the house, a final vote on the $715,000,000 agriculture appropriation bill was scheduled for today—with the FSA left out in the cold. Five days of debate ended yesterday without restoration of funds for the FSA. The abbreviated measure also curtails farm benefit payments, does away with crop insurance after this season and institutes other economies.

Apart from its floor activity, the house heard leaders of opposing factions in the pay-as-you-go tax fight making one "last try" to raise some sort of mutually agreeable measure out of the ashes of previous compromise attempts.

With Republican Leader Martin of Massachusetts saying "today will settle it one way or the other," one bi-partisan conference member said the Republicans who support skip-a-year and the opposing Democrats might, "from sheer exhaustion," agree to cancel about 50 per cent of either 1942 or 1943 taxes to put the taxpayers on a pay-as-you go program.

The OWI announcement said that black market butchers work "secretly and in haste," keeping only readily salable cuts of meat—thus losing such things as gut thread for surgical sutures; adrenalin, used to check hemorrhage and as a heart stimulant; and insulin.

Pay-As-You-Go Tax Is Favored 4 to 1 in Poll

By GEORGE GALLUP
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

PRINCETON, N. J., April 20—Unless some unforseen development arises, the American public will have its way on pay-as-you-go taxation. In accord with overwhelming public sentiment in favor of such a step, the house is rushing to take action this week on a pay-as-you-go measure.

In a nationwide survey of the views of the taxpaying public made following the bitter debate on the pay-as-you-go policy and various methods for putting it into effect, the Institute has found that sentiment for pay-as-you-go is even higher now than it was before the debate started.

Only two taxpayers in every ten with opinions on the subject favor the system of tax collection in force at present. All the rest want

Allies Add 20 More Axis Planes to Bag in Tunisia

Total for 48 Hours Now Placed at 112, 70 of Them Giant German Transports.

By The Associated Press

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, April 20—Twelve more giant axis aerial transports and eight other enemy planes were destroyed by fighter planes of the allies' northwest African air force in offensive sweeps off the Tunisian coast yesterday, the allied communique announced today.

With three more planes accounted for in reports of Sunday's aerial battle royal and four more enemy aircraft destroyed in sweeps over the front, the allied air forces operating in the region brought to 112 their total bag of axis planes in 48 hours. The total included 70 of the giant Junkers-52 freighters and transports.

Flying Fortresses in the strategic air force attacked Tunis again, heavily punishing the port and shipping in the harbor, and the airfield at La Sebaia, north of Tunis, was covered with missiles from medium and light bombers.

The Germans have made a counterattack in the central sector against French troops, but this was repulsed Sunday night, the headquarters bulletin said. Only patrol action was reported from the rest of the land front.

Air Fields Attacked

Large fires were started Sunday night at La Marsa by allied air raids, and other enemy airfields also were strafed.

"From all these operations 12 of our aircraft are missing," headquarters announced.

Sunday's axis plane toll was first computed at 5 planes. Further reports, it was announced, shows an additional three fighter planes were destroyed.

Besides the 12 transports and eight other enemy planes shot down yesterday, four more enemy panes were destroyed in the day's fighting, a total of 27.

(The death toll from the RAF Sunday night raid on the Italian navy base at Spezia was listed at eight dead and 50 injured, the Rome radio said.

(The Italian announcement also declared an allied submarine had been sunk in the Tyrrhenian sea after a long chase by an anti-submarine boat.

(The German communique also said there was lively activity in the Tunisian mountains and said several "local enemy attacks" had been repulsed.

(The Berlin radio, in a broadcast recorded by The Associated Press, asserted that the German air force destroyed 13 allied planes yesterday in Tunisia.)

Malta Planes Bag Two

The allied air forces, emphasizing their supremacy over Tunisia and the Mediterranean with their punishing blows to axis air strength, furnished a token of what they can do both to Rommel's aerial supply lines and to whatever hope he may have of taking any sizable portion of his Army out of Tunisia by plane.

(A Malta communique said two Junkers-52's and two Junkers-88 bombers were shot down by Malta Spitfires yesterday, and Valletta dispathes said a third Junker-52 was accounted for by Mosquito bombers from the fortress isle.

(In London it was assumed these three were in addition to the figures of the allied headquarters communique, bringing the two-day total to 73 axis transports or 117 planes.)

(Well-informed military quarters in London said there were no signs of wholesale axis evacuation of military forces from Tunisia despite the shooting down of transports loaded with military personnel. The passengers may consist largely of specialists no longer needed in Africa, it was suggested.)

In fact the German counterattack and the scale of the continued air war were taken as indications that the Germans were determined to hold the Tunisian bridgehead standing as a guard to the stepping stones to the European mainland.

BANKS TO OPEN FRIDAY NIGHTS

Action Taken at Request of Marion Manpower Group To Curb Absenteeism.

Marion banks will remain open Friday nights from 5 to 7 p. m. starting this week to cash checks and transact other banking business.

Representatives of the banks made this announcement to the Marion Area War Manpower committee last night in answer to the committee's request for evening bank service to curb absenteeism among Marion war workers.

The committee, in a conference with bank representatives at the U. S. Employment Service last night, agreed with a suggestion of one of the bankers that the extra hours probably should be given a trial period after which a study could be made to determine whether absenteeism is lowered substantially by the plan.

The banking representatives withdrew after a general discussion of the extra hours and, after a conference of their own, reported back that the 5 to 7 p. m. hours had been agreed on and that the plan will be started subject to any changes the banks might care to make.

Factor In Absenteeism

In the discussion of the manpower committee and the banking representatives, Ben T. Wiant, a member of the committee, said lack of extra-hour banking service is believed to have been a double-barreled factor in absenteeism. Many workers have said they have taken a day off to attend to financial matters, this situation having become worse since many women who formerly looked after such matters for an entire family have taken jobs in war industry, he said. The other factor is the tendency of some workers to cash their checks at cafes and to remain there most of the evening, Mr. Wiant continued. He commented that Saturday, although it is a time-and-a-half day for many plants, has approximately twice the normal absenteeism, and a substantial part of it is believed due to workers "making a night of it" on Friday nights when they get their checks cashed, he said.

He also pointed out that banks throughout the country are adjusting their business hours to meet war workers problems.

Other Hours Considered

There was some discussion of what extra hours would best serve the workers. Some of the possible hours mentioned were 4:30 to 6:30 and 7 to 9. Experience in other cities has indicated workers prefer to get their checks cashed immediately after leaving work rather than going home for their evening meal and coming downtown later, R. L. Poland, one of the banking representatives, said. He added he had corresponded with Dayton banks and learned they had tried a 6 to 8 p. m. schedule but changed to 5 to 7 p. m. which proved more popular with workers. After a checkup to determine the quitting time of workers in the larger Marion industries, it was agreed by both the banker and committee groups that the 5 to 7 schedule probably would serve best. However, if experience shows other hours would be more helpful, the schedule may be changed.

Offers To Make Survey

Mr. Wiant offered in behalf of the industries to conduct a survey after an experimental period to determine the wishes of the workers. It also was mentioned that utility companies might be asked to receive payments of bills on an extra hour plan if the additional bank hours prove popular.

The banks were represented at the meeting by O. E. Kennedy and E. L. Bush of the Marion County bank, R. L. Poland and Frantz U. Huber of the Fahey bank and H. E. White and E. Paul Bachman of the Security City bank.

MORNING SHAVE IN AFRICA. One close shave every morning on the Tunisian front is enough for Pfc. Fabian Lauer of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., so he is careful not to move too far from his trench where he can roll to safety should the Nazis stage an attack.

Anti-Gambling Bill Killed

House Rejects Measure Aimed at Breaking Up Numbers Racket in Ohio.

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., April 20—The Ohio house of representatives has turned thumbs down on an anti-gambling bill designed to kill the numbers racket by providing stiffer penalties for its operators.

A bill proposing a maximum $1,000 fine and seven years' imprisonment for a promoter convicted a second time, and a $1,000 fine and three years in prison for an agent found guilty two or more times of selling numbers—or policy—tickets fell eight votes short of winning approval last night.

The measure recommended for passage by the judiciary committee, received 61 affirmative votes, against 48 noes. Sixty-nine yeas were required for passage.

The maximum penalties provided in the defeated legislation compare with top sentence of a $500 fine and six months in jail under present laws.

Two Amendments Offered

Final vote came after action on two amendments which provided most of the ammunition for debate.

One, sponsored by Chester K. Gillespie (R-Cuyahoga), provided possession of numbers tickets would be classed as a misdemeanor, punishable by a three months' jail sentence. It was adopted.

The second, introduced by John J. Buckley, Mahoning Democrat, sought to exempt churches, fraternal organizations and others operating bingo games and raffles for charitable purposes. It was defeated.

Buckley attempted to secure the exemption by changing the wording of the bill to make it apply only to persons engaging in such enterprises "for his own profit."

Benjamin F. Reading (R-Lucas), a minister and one of the three sponsors of the measure, declared after the session a "lack of understanding" of the intent of the bill as regards bingo and raffles apparently contributed to its defeat.

Reading declared bingo and raffles were not the target of the

WAR PLANT AREA ROAD BIDS TAKEN

Bids on four road improvement projects designed to ease congested traffic areas near the Scioto Ordnance Plant were opened this morning in the office of the state highway director in Columbus. Contracts on three of the four units on which bids were received will be let within the next five days.

One of the four units, the proposal to widen and resurface Route 23 from the North Main street corporation limit to the junction of Routes 23 and 4 did not bring any bids, the public relations department of the highway department reported. The highway director probably will readvertise for bids on this project, which is expected to cost $42,000.

Two bids were received on Proposal 2 for widening with either asphaltic concrete or waterbound macadam 1.369 of a mile of Route 98 north of Route 30-S and the Erie railroad in Claridon township. Bids recieved on this project estimated by the highway department to cost no more than $8,200 were one by the U. S. Construction Co. for $7,944 and another by the Ohio Engineering Co. of Lorain for $7,833.

Two bids were also received for the paving of East Fairground in Marion township between North Greenwood street and Madison avenue. The U. S. Construction Co.'s bid was $72,333 and James T. Shideler of Sunbury bid $73,920. The highway department's estimate was $74,660 for this project which must be completed by Oct. 15. It calls for the paving with either asphaltic concrete or waterbound macadam of 1.222 miles of East Fairground street.

The fourth proposal, paving with surface treated waterbound macadam of 1.067 miles of the Linn-Hughes road running east of Route 4 to the Pennsylvania railroad, drew only one bid, that of R. S. McNamara of Delaware for $49,994.

SEES FIGHTING MEN TRAINED IN SOUTHEAST

Commander-in-Chief Declares He's Well Pleased with Appearance of Troops.

By DOUGLASS B. CORNELL
Associated Press Writer

ABOARD ROOSEVELT TRAIN, April 20—President Roosevelt is making a second major inspection of America's expanding war effort and has seen tens of thousands of fit, bronzed troops which, he indicated, will be used to hammer out or maintain a second front in Europe.

Weaving through the southeastern states by special train and motor, he has visited a Marine corps base, a WAAC training center, and five Army posts, and reviewed division after division of fit-looking men, with months of toughening behind them.

Ahead of them may be glory on the European continent.

"The troops you have seen will do a good job in Europe?" a reporter asked at a press conference aboard his train.

Mr. Roosevelt replied that he would say so from what he had seen of our troops in North Africa and here back home.

The Chief Executive permitted an announcement today he had toured Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama and Arkansas as a sequel to the swing which took him from border to border and coast to coast last fall, checking up on military and war production establishments.

He left Washington April 13, and, briefly and chronologically, here is where he has stopped and what he has seen:

April 14—Marine corps base at Parris Island, S. C.

April 14—Maxwell Field, Ala., near Montgomery, where fledgling pilots receive the rudimentary schooling which enables them to become crack aviators.

April 15—Fort Benning, Ga., where basic training is provided for troops that drop from the sky by parachute.

April 15 and 16—Warm Springs, Ga., where Mr. Roosevelt spent a leisurely 24 hours seeing old friends and looking over an infantile paralysis foundation which he was instrumental in establishing.

April 17—Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., where the Chief Executive saw for the first time a training center for the women's army auxiliary corps.

April 17—Camp Forrest, Tenn., where the President inspected the 80th infantry division.

April 18—Camp Joseph T. Robinson, Ark., near Little Rock, where he attended Palm Sunday church services with 3,400 officers and men.

The Chief Executive told the press it was hard to pick out what had impressed him most. He thought it was the great improvement in troops of all kinds, as compared with what he had seen on his trip last September. He said he thought the country was turning out snappier troops in better physical condition.

Morale in general he described as very, very high, and he asserted the men looked awfully fit. He spoke, too, of the permanent value of the educational and physical training programs in military camps.

Last fall, the Chief Executive said he had found Washington lagging far behind the rest of the nation in war spirit, and he de-

FIVE JAP BASES ATTACKED BY PLANES

By The Associated Press

Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters announced today allied warplanes, operating alone despite the enemy's mounting aerial strength, attacked five Japanese bases yesterday in the islands above Australia.

On both sides, the tremendous struggle for control of the southwest Pacific skies had slackened appreciably.

Targets hit by single United Nations planes included the enemy airdromes at Hollandia, Dutch New Guinea; Gasmata and Cape Gloucester, New Britain, and Lae and Finschhafen, New Guinea.

A small Japanese ship was also bombed off Tanimbar island.

On the Burma front, British headquarters reported that Field Marshal Sir Archibald P. Wavell's forces ambushed 200 Japanese troops on Mayu ridge, along the Bay of Bengal, killing 25 and wounding "many more."

Otherwise, the situation remained unchanged as the British held strong defensive positions after falling back from the Mayu peninsula, while RAF planes raked Japanese ground positions in low-level attacks.

Roosevelt To Speak on Radio Net Tonight

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, April 20—President Roosevelt will address the nation at 11 o'clock, eastern war time, tonight in a speech to be broadcast over all radio networks, the White House has announced.

Subject of the talk was not given in the White House statement issued late last night.

NEW YORK, April 20—All networks have rearranged their schedules at 11 o'clock tonight for the announced broadcast by President Roosevelt. More than 525 stations are expected to be in the combined hookup.

WYANDOT CO. MAN KILLED IN ACTION

By The United Press

UPPER SANDUSKY, April 20—Official notice of the death of Pvt. Fred Lewis Kagy, 22, had been received today by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Kagy of northeastern Wyandot county. Private Kagy had previously been reported as missing in action.

The war department telegram said he was aboard a passenger ship torpedoed Feb. 2, 1943, off the coast of Newfoundland and that his life as the result of enemy action.

Mr. and Mrs. Kagy were notified Feb. 10 that their son was missing in action. The same day Samuel Reynolds of Harpster was also notified his son, Pvt. William C. Reynolds, believed to have been a passenger on the same vessel, was missing. Mr. Reynolds has received no further word.

Private Kagy was a member of the Aug. 23, 1942, selective service call from Wyandot county and was inducted into the army at Hayes, and was sent to Ft. Benjamin Harrison, Ind., two weeks later for assignment and from there went to Fort Eustis, Va., where he became a member of an anti-aircraft unit.

Private Kagy is the first Wyandot county men whose death has been officially reported as a result of any action in World War II. Pvt. Foster Ivan Stief, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Stief of near Upper Sandusky, was killed in a motor accident in the Pacific area.

Marion Area War Manpower Group's First Appeal Involves Bucyrus Man

U. S. Rubber Co. Acts in Case of Worker Who Left War Plant; Decision Withheld Pending Study.

The first appeal case since the Marion Area War Manpower committee was formed to conduct an employment stabilization program in this district came before the committee at a meeting last night in the U. S. Employment Service office.

It involved a Bucyrus resident who, after working at the Scioto Ordnance Plant as a fireman, took a job as a fireman at Bucyrus. He said his new job is that of a senior fireman rather than a regular fireman, and that it eliminates daily trips between Marion and Bucyrus for him.

The U. S. Rubber Co., operating the ordnance plant, refused to grant him a statement of availability, which he had to have before his new employer would hire him. He appealed to the U. S. Employment service and the service granted him a statement. He then accepted the Bucyrus job and went to work.

Rubber Co. Appeals

The matter came before the committee last night on an appeal of the U. S. Rubber Co., asking that the committee reverse the employment office decision granting the man the right to change jobs.

No decision was reached. The committee voted to hold the case over to the next meeting and to obtain information in the meantime about the distance regularly traveled by employes of Marion factories in going to and from work and to determine the comparative importance of the two jobs involved from the standpoint of the war effort.

This action came after a discussion in which it was proposed that the committee set up some mileage figure it would regard as reasonable for workers to travel to and from work. This discussion brought up many debatable points. One member pointed out the Bucyrus worker whose case was being heard drove his car only every other day, sharing rides on alternate days with another man coming to Marion. If four or five workers shared a car and one were to drop out to take a job at home, the car nevertheless would have to make the daily trips, and no gasoline nor

President Sees Troops Fight Mock Battle with Live Ammunition

ENROUTE WITH PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT TO WARM SPRINGS, Ga., April 18—(Delayed)—With the President of the United States sitting a scant hundred feet outside the danger area, machine guns and mortars spewed live ammunition into an enemy position today in realistic mimic warfare at Fort Benning, Ga.

The battle indoctrination problem, for a class of officer candidates receiving instruction from a young captain, was the nearest thing to actual combat President Roosevelt had seen in all his many inspections of the nation's military operations. He was like a proud parent visiting school.

From the crest of Holiday hill, he watched three squads of infantrymen, with blackened faces and camouflaged uniforms, subdue enemy concentrations on a ridge across a valley.

As they advanced under fire simulated by dynamite charges set in the terrain, one lad was lifted like a puppet when a charge exploded under his feet.

It was but one of a series of demonstrations of how Benning brings soldiers in from the ranks and trains them in large numbers to become officers.

After a roundabout train trip from the Marine Corps base at Parris Island, S. C., which he visited yesterday, the Chief Executive came to Benning from Maxwell Field, near Montgomery, Ala., where he inspected an air corps basic training center.

With the commander-in-chief looking on from an open car, 108 planes, silvery North American trainers flown by cadets taking advanced single engine training at Craig Field, Selma, Ala., took off in groups of three, circled the field, and passed in review.

Asks Many Questions

"They look all right," the President commented.

He shot question after question at officers surrounding him, including Maj. Gen. Ralph Royce, commanding officer of the southeast training center.

Before Mr. Roosevelt left the field, to motor to the recreation center, an entire wing of cadets sang the air corps song.

"Very good," the Chief Executive remarked. "Right together, too, and I didn't see any leader."

"He probably was up on the roof," Royce said. "They sing everywhere they go, and it's good for the army."

COURT REFUSES WRIT TO BAN BINGO GAMES

Judges Decline To Act Against Cincinnati City Officials.

By The Associated Press

CINCINNATI, April 20 — A [illegible] chance and a cost [illegible] law" the first district Ohio court of appeals yesterday refused to grant a writ of mandamus to compel city officials to ban what has been [illegible] a year, Cincinnati [illegible].

In a unanimous opinion [illegible] court, Judges Simon Rose, Stanley Matthews and Richard N. Hildebrant wrote that "the court feels there is a great duty enjoined by law resulting from the defendants' respective stations as law enforcement officers, to cancel and revoke [illegible] outstanding permits since the effect thereof is to induce a violation of the gambling laws which said officers on their oaths are duty-bound to uphold."

Recent official [illegible] disclosed that more than $1,000,000 had changed hands [illegible] games here in the last [illegible] years.

The suit was brought last November by Mrs. Margaret Elliott Keller, a housewife. She named as defendants City Manager C. O. Sherrill, Police Chief Eugene Weatherly and other city officials as defendants.

The court of appeals held that a petition for mandamus was not correct procedure, that there was adequate remedy at hand under section 4211 of the Ohio general code. This provides that the solicitor "shall apply in the name of the corporation to a court of competent jurisdiction for an order of injunction to restrain the misapplication of funds [illegible] or the abuse of corporate powers."

The opinion noted that Mrs. Keller had failed to allege or prove that she had written demand upon the city solicitor before instituting the suit and that the city solicitor failed to make the application.

City officials declined comment pending what they said was a desire to study the ruling.

Study of Spanish Grows in Ohio Schools; 100 Enrolled at Harding

Students Among 18,000 in Classes Throughout State; Pupils Here Grouped in Five Sections.

Harding High school ...tion to the recent ...h high schools toward ... language elective.

...of Ohio secondary ... of learning shows ...18,000 high school stu... taking Spanish. Hard... furnishes 100 of these ...ere are five sections of ... and II at Harding with ...hese first year classes, ... mainly of juniors, and ...n year classes, consist... entirely of seniors.

...considerable number of ... students makes that sub... ...w a leading foreign ... of Harding High school.

Spanish is one of the romance languages, being derived from Latin, which is the basis of many of the world languages, including English.

Spanish was introduced at Harding last year with Miss Elizabeth Conley, formerly a English teacher at Central Junior High school, as instructor. Since the students had never received any Spanish training before, only the first year classes were formed. Spanish pupils showed much interest and enthusiasm in the subject last year, and thus increased enrollment in Miss Conley's sections this year as a result.

Interest Maintained

This school term the students continued to show a keen interest in the subject. Although the pupils could not speak Spanish fluently with some Latin-American neighbor, they learn basic fundamentals that will aid them in becoming ready conversationalists with Spanish speaking people in the future.

The first year students began the course with pronunciations of the various vowels and consonants in Spanish and gradually worked into words and sentence structure. They have learned such everyday processes and items as the months of the year, days of the week, expressions of courtesy, and how to tell time. Both the first and second year students sang Christmas carols during the Yuletide season and they also know several familiar American songs in Spanish. Miss Conley has acquired some double-faced records in order to familiarize the boys and girls with Latin-American folk melodies.

Got Early Start

Included in the second year Spanish sections are two sophomores who had first year Spanish in another school system. Many schools in the United States offer Spanish as a ninth grade course. Aside from these two pupils, the second year classes are composed wholly of seniors. As these students have learned the fundamentals of the language, they pay more attention to translation passages. Miss Conley adds that the seniors do quite well with their translations although their experience in such work has been negligible. The second year textbook is "Segunda Curso de Espanol" while the beginners' book is "Primer Curso de Espanol."

Spanish takes on added importance today because of the closer bonds that have been forged between the United States and Latin-America in their common aim to defeat the axis. A modified system of reciprocity has been developed between this country and south America in culture. Just as American students are taking more Spanish, the Latin-American schools are requiring some English and general knowledge of the United States. Miss Conley feels that high school boys and girls as well as many adults do not have sufficient knowledge of Latin-America. In her Spanish classes she is trying to develop a better understanding of our Latin-American neighbors. She accomplishes this through various projects, songs, and stories that entertain the Harding students as well as enlighten them.

Publications Received

The Harding Spanish classes subscribe to "La Prensa," a Spanish newspaper printed in New York. After the paper has been discussed in class, copies are distributed to some of the pupils to read. In this way, a High school pupil is better able to grasp the grammar and construction of the Spanish language. Earl N. Hale, general secretary of the Y.M.C.A., sends the classes copies of the Rotary magazine in Spanish. These publications along with other extra projects and regular class room work help to develop a better Latin-American complex in the students.

One of the features of the Harding Spanish classes is the honorary Spanish club, "El Circulo Espanol." At the beginning of the first semester only seniors with an "A" average were eligible for the club but in the March meeting juniors with an "A" average were invited. The club meets monthly and devotes much of its time to Latin-American relations and problems. On Pan-American Day, April 14, Marcos Kavlin, native of Bolivia, addressed the organization.

Although at the present no Harding student can talk with any reasonable fluency and accuracy in Spanish, Miss Conley hopes within a few years the course may be developed to such a degree that extemporaneous talking in the romance tongue will be possible.

In Second Year

Since the course was started only last year, the teaching method here as in the case of other schools in the country where the study is new, has not reached the full stage of development desired by the instructors. At the same time, however, the teachers point out that as Spanish is a comparatively easy language to learn, there is reason to believe within a few years high school students will be conversing fluently in the Spanish language.

Navy Explains Why Addresses of Men Not Published

A statement explaining why newspapers do not publish the specific addresses of men in the armed services has been issued by the Navy department at the suggestion of the office of censorship.

The statement follows:

"Many newspapers, magazines, company periodicals and other publications have asked the Navy department to stand as appropriate authority to publish local lists of naval personnel stationed at sea or abroad, together with full mailing addresses. For reasons of military security, it has been necessary to deny authorization to publish full addresses, either individually or in list form.

"The complete mailing address of naval personnel includes the man's name, his rank or rating, and the ship or station (in some cases represented by Navy number) to which attached and requires that the communication be marked care of the fleet post office, New York or San Francisco, as the case (Atlantic or Pacific fleet) might be.

"It can readily be understood how a series of such lists, if published, could reveal the fleet assignments of a large number of warships, and, at the same time, identify personnel with specific vessels—both constituting information of value to the enemy. For this reason it has been necessary to eliminate ships from addresses which are carried in print.

"It is true that this elimination destroys the value of such lists so far as encouraging readers to write to the personnel is concerned. Letters which do not carry the ship or station cannot be delivered, and all individuals writing to their Navy friends or members of their families in the service are urged at all times to make sure that such information is included in the address. Private knowledge of a man's ship or station is one thing, but dissemination of such information in published form is quite another, and considerations of the military security involved must come first with the Navy."

WPB Comes To Aid of Ailing Ohio Girl

By The Associated Press

CANTON, O., April 20 — Nine-year-old Joan Bates of North Canton is breathing easier today because the local war production board office came to her aid.

Suffering from a growth in her throat which necessitates breathing through a silver tube, Joan was inconvenienced when pipe stem cleaners disappeared from the market here recently.

Her father, Elmer Bates, appealed to the WPB to help him get a supply of the cleaners, needed to swab out the silver tube at least four times daily.

E. O. Kuendig, WPB district manager, verified the need through the girl's doctor and then instructed his field men to be on the lookout for pipe cleaners. But it was Evan Corns, in charge of runding up typewriters for the government, who produced. On a trip to Cleveland he visited some friends in the wholesale tobacco business, explained Joan's plight and enlisted their help. The result was a shipment of 1,750 pipe cleaners to her home.

Ohioans Get Furloughs After 16 Months of War

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, April 20 — Three Ohioans were on a list announced yesterday by the war department containing the names of officers and enlisted men of the United States bombardment squadron who have returned home on furlough after 16 months of fighting and 200,000 miles of flying.

The members of the squadron, most of the under 30 years old, have won over 500 decorations; some of them have fought around the world from the Philippines to Tunisia.

The Ohioans are First Lieutenants Leonard J. Gossard of Lodi, James M. Kaiser of Youngstown, and Sergeant Frederick W. Shick of Bellaire.

Chinese Sailor Lives 130 Days Alone on Raft

By The Associated Press

LONDON, April 20 — The story of a Chinese who survived 130 days alone on a life raft after his ship was torpedoed—47 days longer than men have ever been known before to endure the rigors of a lifeboat or raft—was disclosed by P. J. Noel Baker, parliamentary secretary of the war transport ministry.

The name of the Chinese was not revealed in the brief mention of his exploit, but British sources said his ship was sunk in the South Atlantic and he was in South America presumably in a hospital.

FORMER MARION TEACHER NOW AT CAMP ADAIR

Pfc. Delbert Smith's Letter Read at Church Service.

H. W. Johnson of 183 West Center street, an elder in the Seventh Day Adventist church, recently received a letter from Pfc. Delbert W. Smith, former teacher at Central Junior High school, who is stationed with a medical battalion at Camp Adair, Ore. The letter was read at the morning worship service Saturday morning.

Pfc. Smith has been at Camp Adair for the past six months. Since entering the battalion Pfc. Smith has been a medical technician, a dental assistant, an assistant at the eye, ear, nose and throat department and is now a cook with the unit. The duty of the unit, he stated, is to set up a field hospital about five miles behind the battle line.

Pfc. Smith told of the Adventist churches of the vicinity.

For the past six years Pfc. Smith had been an instructor in mathematics at Central. He was inducted in October, 1942 from Detroit where he had been working during the summer. While in Marion he made his home with his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. William Ball of South High street.

WACCS' Educational Requirements Raised

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, April 20—Establishment of new educational and ... enrollment in the Women's Army Auxiliary corps was announced yesterday by the war department.

Under regulations which became effective April 15 recruits must have completed at least two years of high school, and score at least 60 in the WAAC mental alertness test. The grade of 60 is not a percentage, but a marking standard fixed by psychologists who devised the test.

Previously the WAAC had no fixed educational requirement, and the minimum score in the mental test was 50.

Rock-a-Bye Beddie

ROCKING BED. You can snuggle to slumber with this gadget, its inventor claims.

By MAX FULLERTON
Associated Press Features

CHARLESTON, W. Va. — We can now add the rocking-horse bed for immobilized patients who would like to put themselves to sleep.

Auburn "Bulldog" Taylor, local inventor, gazed upon his latest boon to the ailing and declaimed:

"This bed is bound to have a most soothing effect upon sick folks who can't move themselves. You see, this motor beneath the bed causes the bed to move back and forth, ever so gently. It breaks up the monotony of having to stay in one place all the time. The patient can start or stop the movement by pressing a button."

Because of priorities, "Bulldog" had to dig up a second hand quarter-horsepower motor and build six self-motivated bed from stray clapboards and fence palings.

About three years ago Taylor, 50-year-old pressman for the Charleston Gazette, concocted a contraption of boards, pulleys and weights which allowed an arthritic friend to put on his pants without bending his body or legs. The stocky war veteran is also the inventor of a widely-sold portable fountain which permits newspapers to use their regular black equipment to print color without excessive cost, and has developed machinery to use a water-base carbon printing ink, as contrasted to oil-based inks now in general use.

UHLER'S
(2d Floor)

The Marion Star,
Marion, Ohio.

Gentlemen:

Just a few lines to let The Star staff know how much I profited by their Want Ad Department.

My first ad was to find a home in Marion. I got several replies through The Star and bought a nice home at a reasonable price.

My next ad was for a western saddle which I bought at a very low cost.

My next ad was selling a pony which I did at a nice profit and could have sold several more if I had them.

My next ad was for a man to build a shed. I had several calls and selected a man who did a very good job at a very nominal fee.

My next ad was selling a sow. I had 89 calls and it was sold to the first man who called.

I think at this time, that people have a number of items lying around that are not being used and will eventually be thrown out after they have gone beyond the usable point. If these people would place an ad and sell them to someone who can use them now they would be helping to serve the war effort. First, by helping someone who cannot buy the items now, and secondly, they could use the money from the items they sold to buy War Bonds and Stamps.

Very truly yours,

P. S. SENS,
R. D. No. 7, Smeltzer Road.
Marion, Ohio.

GREEK PREMIER'S SON JOINS U. S. ARMY

Family in Exile in England; He's a Private.

International News Service

[illegible]NA, Neb. — A dark, courteous man in the uniform of a private in the United States army recently revealed in Omaha that he was a son of the prime minister of the Greek government in exile.

He is Yrannis Tsouderos. He told a hostess at the Service Men's center in the course of conversation. "You wouldn't have known me, but you might have known my father, Emmanuel Tsouderos. He is prime minister of Greece and now head of the Greek government-in-exile in London."

He explained that his father, brother and sister are in England while he is in the United States to continue his education. He received a scholarship to Carelton college at Northfield, Minn., and was a student there when he enlisted in the army a few days before he passed through Omaha.

His hostess said she understood that many United States citizens were belonging to our armed forces. "That is my case," the young Greek answered.

"I believe that Greece will be liberated, but in joining the Army I feel that I am helping in a position to help. There isn't anything they can do for me that I can't take as long as my family is in England."

The Tsouderous family, he said, escaped from Greece with King George by way of Crete and Egypt.

English Girl Adds Only Feminine Touch To American Bomber Base

By GLADWIN HILL
Associated Press Writer

AT A U. S. BOMBER STATION SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND —A husky, dark-haired good-looking English girl named Marjory Allen has a spot a lot of American girls would give their last pair of nylons for. She's the only girl among the hundreds of American fliers at this station.

She holds her unique status because she's a WAAF—a member of the women's auxiliary air force—attached to the nucleus of RAF liaison officers left here when the RAF turned the station over to the Eighth U. S. air force.

She's a cipher clerk, coding and decoding operational messages; she eats in the officers' mess and spends free evenings around the officers' club; and is billeted at a farm a couple of miles away, where, if she is lucky, a passing jeep from the station picks her up and chauffeurs her to work in the morning.

Ran Ship Gift Shop

You may have seen Marjory if you were a trans-Atlantic traveler before the war, because she used to run the gifts shops on the Queen Mary and the Aquitania.

When the war started she was at sea on the Aquitania bound for England. The German liner Bremen had left New York just before them. "We quite expected her to be waiting in the middle of the ocean for us," she says.

Having lived in Westcliff, at the mouth of the Thames, experienced the Zeppelin bombings in the World war and watched German planes laying mines in this war, she says, she got more action before she got into the service than since.

She got the assignment here by volunteering when they asked for girls who'd like to work with the Americans.

"I like Americans," she says. "I like American cigarets and American food. And rum and coke."

She likes working with the American fliers, but still is slightly amazed at the amount of kidding they do.

"I always take anything they say with a large lump of salt," she says.

No Place for Romance

Her corner on femininity at the station doesn't yield as many romantic opportunities as probably would be depicted in a Hollywood version of the situation featuring Veronica Lake. The station is pretty well preoccupied from breakfast to bedtime with the job of dropping bombs on the axis. And when the boys get leaves, they like to go to town, so while Marjory gets plenty of dates, she doesn't get much better than a girl on the outside.

Her favorite memory is the three sisters of King Zog of Albania, the ones who used to go around in sailor suits.

"They looked like a comedy team," she says. "They had a maid who went around with them and kept bowing and walking backwards. It tickled me so I forgot to call them madame."

The Damage Has Been Done

DISCUSSION of President Roosevelt's bitterly attacked decision to bar congressmen and newspapermen from the forthcoming conference on international food problems will continue—and it will be interesting. Mr. Roosevelt, congress and the press all may learn a lot about their relationship to one another.

But the damage has been done, as far as the conference is concerned. By tacitly admitting that its affairs cannot conveniently be made accessible to the people's representatives or their newspapers, the President has exposed it to popular suspicion and made it the butt of rumor and speculation. The conference is feeling the usual consequences of news suppression before the first thud of the gavel. It is the victim of imagination.

Perhaps it can be salvaged, but that would mean undoing the needless damage done by an ill-considered executive decision. And nothing, unfortunately, can undo the damage done by the President's demonstration of impatience with the operation of traditional institutions. Both congress and the press have been held dispensable in a test case.

It is possible that to have proceeded in the usual way would have given the international negotiations on food a heavy handicap. Congressmen might have lacked sympathy; they might have talked out of turn. The press in its reporting of facts and publication of opinion might have disclosed problems.

But if Mr. Roosevelt ever dreamed that his job would be simpler if he had no congressmen in his hair or newspapermen looking over his shoulder, all he needs to do is take an inventory of the mess he's in now. He certainly hasn't solved anything by deciding to keep the things that need to be solved under cover.

More Talent for Marion

MARION continues to hold its high rating as a community outstanding in the realm of music. The latest evidence of this is especially pleasing, for it comes from accomplishments of some of our younger musicians, and so it gives us a gratifying feeling of assurance that we have ample talent for our future enjoyment and entertainment.

Honors and recognition won by members of the Marion Junior and Juvenile Lecture-Recital clubs in the annual statewide competitive festivals at Columbus provided this city with a substantial share of the laurels and for this the young musicians, their teachers and their sponsors have the community's thanks and congratulations. We thank them because excellence in music is unsurpassed as an expression of the finer human qualities and when Marion musicians win recognition for performance of that kind they most certainly reflect credit on the city they represent.

Especially is this true when the people of a city know good music and show their appreciation of it. We feel sure Marion has this knowledge and sense of appreciation, for otherwise it would not be favored with so many fine musicians and musical organizations.

From Japan comes a prediction of air raids on American cities by both the Japs and Nazis. About all America has to say on the subject is to advise the prospective visitors not to bother about loading up enough gas for a round trip.

Our Optional Necessities

THE "necessities of life," a phrase that has included almost everything, may have to be revised before the war is over.

American Institute of Public Opinion discloses that in a list of 10 necessities—butter, sugar, canned goods, meat, coffee, gasoline, shoes, cheese, tires and fuel oil—there is a wide spread between public opinion on the necessity of meat, which is the thing hardest to cut down on and cheese, which is the easiest thing.

Gasoline occurs before sugar, butter and canned goods and right after meat and coffee, the two most cherished necessities. But of course any list of average preferences fails to be convincing, because vegetarians might place cheese first, pedestrians would have no need for gasoline and tires, and diabetics and tea drinkers would have to substitute something for sugar and coffee. The upshot of any attempt to prepare an inclusive list of necessities would be to include everything under the sun, with a general footnote that every one of them could be done without in a pinch; i.e., all necessities are optional.

General Eisenhower has generously termed Rommel a "great general" but in so doing probably had in mind the viewpoint of old-time pugilistic champion Bob Fitzsimmons, who said, "The bigger they are the harder they fall."

There are some predictions that the Philadelphia Phillies will finish out of the National League cellar this season. If that's a possibility, it's not being over-optimistic to predict that both the Nazis and Japs will be licked before the close of the year.

News Behind the News

Stabilization of International Currencies After War Presents Complex Problems.

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, April 20—One [illegible] everyone wants to achieve is stabilization of international currencies.

The [illegible] must be done is allow trade, settlement of debts, peaceful [illegible]. Yet the Keynes-White proposals to the British-American governments to achieve this result have set off so many sparks of criticism among the financial experts that it seems likely their plans cannot be carried out.

So far, the debate has been confined to the experts, but you had better start thinking about it, because all the fundamental clashes of theory concerning the future world are involved in these plans to handle the money. He who holds the money bag controls the world.

Both plans set up an international board of directors primarily to handle a fund of about $5,000,000,000 (British plan would place no limit on figures) we would contribute $2,000,000,000, the rest of the world $3,000,000,000.

The contributions to the kitty would be 25 per cent gold, 25 per cent in currency (American dollars, British pounds, etc.) and 50 per cent in government bonds of the various countries.

Gold Problem

Right here, you run into the fact that this is not the gold standard which Lord Keynes (vaguely) and Mr. White (directly) have professed it to be. It is merely a shadow of gold substance.

We have $22,500,000,000 of gold in the ground at Fort Knox, the rest of the world about $9,500,000,000, yet only $500,000,000 would be our gold contribution to this fund, leaving us still holding the $23,000,000,000 sack.

The stability of the fund thus would depend not on the 25 per cent gold in its larder, but the 75 per cent of national currencies and government bonds.

What these currencies are to be worth is to be decided by the international board. The group could decide the dollar is too high in relation to the pound and order its devaluation.

Indeed, right now, the British financial writers are complaining that the pound is really worth (in what it can buy) $8 or $10 instead of the $4 which Americans now pay for the British pound under the current stabilization rate. If these British could control the international board, they would devalue our dollar 50 to 75 per cent in relation to the pound.

The administration says the board must have this power over currencies because, after all, the real worth of a dollar, a pound, or a ruble, is not its gold backing, or, in truth, anything else but what it will buy at the grocery store.

High Prices Cheapen Dollar

All the New Deal manipulations in gold did not change the real value of the dollar, but the rising war prices truly devaluated it in the increased prices you pay. In terms of bread, lettuce and meat, your dollar has really gone down.

The rising opposition says the scheme gives away our right to control our own money—and there is no denying this. As in the case of the recent Luce "Freedom of the Air" exposure, the administration contemplates some surrender of its sovereignty over money to an international board upon which our national representation cannot be more than 25 per cent (though our ante is 40 per cent).

The administration feels this is a necessity. The congress is sure to think otherwise because the Constitution gives it the power to fix the value of money, and it does not intend to surrender that power.

The administration argues that all foreign nations will have to surrender the same power under this plan. No doubt, the British will want to if they can get a more favorable rate of exchange or the pound although Keynes' plan envisages complete British control of the board.

Would Stalin Agree

But will Joe Stalin have any of this? Will he give an international board the power over the value of his rubles, the right to channelize his foreign trade, when he has never allowed any alien even to know the simplest facts of his financial situation or his trade position?

Before the war, we had a simple currency stabilization agreement with Britain and France. It worked very well without this sovereignty hocus-pocus. In fact, our treasury made money on it.

Certainly some kind of an agreement like the old one, or otherwise, will be necessary after the war to facilitate foreign trade, because most of the other nations will be bankrupt in both goods and money. They can be expected to buy so much more from us than they sell to us that some facility

(Second of a series of stories on women in part in Civil War.)

BECAUSE the war between the states was on their very doorstep, women of the South felt its privations more severely than those in the North.

In the North there was a steady agricultural development, and women were spared the worst of the tribulations of the home front. Cotton and sugar were scarce however. Flax was thought for a time to be a substitute for cotton but attempts to use it on cotton machinery failed. Sorghum from China as a sugar substitute proved a disappointment, too. Butter sold for 50 cents a pound flour $12 a barrel.

Besides the use of labor-saving machinery such as the newly invented McCormick reaper, women's work in the fields helped save the harvests in the North. They drove reaper teams, harvested corn and took care of the stock. Even children 10 and 12 years old worked the farms. The result was an abundance in some sections of staple products such as wheat, corn, pork and wool.

The plantations in the South had been noted for their wonderful fruit trees, good stock, and vegetable gardens. Yams, beans, chickens, hogs and beef were basic fare.

Butter $28 A Pound

During the war, there was no wood, corn, meat or vegetables in most areas. Fruit trees were bare. Salt was scarce and had to be scraped up from the floors of the smoke houses. Children were surviving on corn pone, dried beans and the vitamins they got out of turnip greens. After dark, mothers used to visit the pocket patches and pick up corn that was left by the horses. Food that could be procured was too expensive: butter cost as much as $28 a pound; meat, $40.

Nevertheless, the spirit of the women was excellent. Except for some needlework many had never done any work. But they toiled alongside what labor could be found in the fields. At home they made flags and did some spinning. Even sheeting and shirting was made on the loom. Some turned their homes into hospitals and remained as nurses. Bandages had to be used over and over, so the women had to wash and sterilize them. There was a scarcity of chloroform and quinine. Clara Barton started the good work which eventually led to the Red Cross.

Lovely garments of taffeta, crepe and satin were remade until there was nothing left but shreds and patches. Then women would line them with newspapers. The frames of their plumed velvet bonnets were saved and recovered with cotton or old draperies; pantalettes were made from worn-out curtains.

Shoes $500 A Pair

Shoes at $500 were ill-fitting coarse ones made by Negro cobblers and often didn't even match. Others were made of old carpets. In spite of all difficulties Southern women always managed to look fastidious. Even a French upsweep hairdo kept the younger girls busy brushing their hair.

Women did everything in their power to provide clothing, food and comforts for their men. The Confederate Army was poorly clothed and soon General Lee's army was in rags. Because of the scarcity of materials many were without shoes. The socks and even the uniforms they wore, in most instances, were made by women. Often by the time a uniform reached a husband who had been living on half rations he had lost so much weight it didn't fit.

Running the blockade was the only means of procuring some essentials and a few luxuries. Confederate dollars being almost worthless, it took more than $3,000 to buy an ordinary table and kitchen chair. A single kitchen utensil that had cost $1 sold for $1,000 in paper money.

But very few women were attracted to advertisements of finery. Most of them willingly sold their valuables, some even their hair for the maintenance of the Confederacy.

Need Seen for Definite Planning About What To Do with Germany.

By WALTER LIPPMANN

NEW YORK, April 20—While there is general conviction that Germany must be disarmed, there is no known and agreed program for achieving this end. The fact that the United Nations do not as yet have a program is an immense advantage to the men who rule Germany.

It gives them a hedged bet on the future: heads they might win, tails they will not really lose. To convince the Germans to fight on to the bitter end, they are able to say that (a) the coalition may still fall apart and let them win a substantial victory, and (b) that the Allies mean to exterminate or enslave the German nation if it does not fight to the bitter end, and (c) that since the Allies are not agreed on a plan, a German Talleyrand will be able in the postwar era to play off the Allies against one another, and thus form some kind of new combination within which the German imperial and military powers can be reconstituted.

They cannot but be confirmed in this view by seeing that what goes by the name of postwar discussion is almost entirely focussed upon the differences among the Allies: now little attenion is given to the fundamental problem of what to do with Germany.

They hear us arguing about the boundaries and the intentions of Russia, about the constitution of the nations that are to be liberated, about India, about China, about the colonial empires. But except that we shall demand an "unconditional surrender," they see us avoiding the subject of Germany.

We do avoid it, and the reason we avoid it is that it is a hard problem, in regard to which there exist few clear ideas, but many strong but conflicting emotions.

Yet we must think about it, and we must think out loud about it. For the problem is too big and too complicated to be solved without a meeting of many minds.

Moreover, the reluctance of responsible officials to take the public into their confidence until they have perfected their own plans and are ready to unveil them on on the day of action is, however, understandable, unwise.

They will find that separate and divergent schools of opinion will have formed among the United Nations and within them, that statesmen and groups of men will have committed themselves to views which, out of interest or pride of opinion or personal vanity, they will not willingly surrender.

There are certain axioms which must control all serious thinking about the German problem.

The first is that the German nation is not going to be exterminated. Nor, though German frontiers may be altered, will Germany be partitioned or dismembered.

The second is that the sins of the fathers will not and cannot be visited upon the children, and, therefore, punishment must be exacted quickly by those who have suffered from those who have sinned.

The third is that a satisfactory German policy must go further than an armed alliance and collective security to suppress or defeat a renewal of German aggressiveness.

Pattern for Policy

It must be designed to cure the German will to commit aggression. Therefore, the policy must establish a police force; and it must deprive Germans of the means to recreate their military power; and it must provide a dominant majority of the German people with a vested interest of their own in liquidating German militarism.

In short, Germany has to be policed, disarmed and re-educated, or more accurately reoriented.

The fourth axiom of our thinking must be, I believe, the recognition that the postwar period, during which Germany is in effect under military government, cannot last longer than 15 years and ought probably not be longer than seven or eight. A system which is more normal than military government must come into effect for the control of Germany over a somewhat longer period of time.

A system, which is not military government, has to rest upon economic incentives. It has to provide a means of controlling the sources of German military power. It has to provide incentives to the United Nations to remain interested in continuing that control. It has to provide incentives to the German masses which will, as time goes on, cause them to benefit by the permanent liquidation of German militarism.

It is within these moral and practical limits that we have, I believe, to approach the German problem. We can come to grips with it by defining what we mean by the disarmament of Germany.

MANPOWER

[illegible] would be saved by the [illegible], it was pointed out.

The U. S. Rubber Co., in a letter presenting the basis for its appeal, pointed out that 75 per cent of the firemen at the plant lived outside of Marion and that restriction by the committee of travel to and from work might clear the way for many more to quit. It also pointed out the worker's only training as a fireman was obtained at the ordnance plant. Since no firemen are available, it would be necessary to replace him with an inexperienced man, the company pointed out.

Hesitating to decide what should be set up as a reasonable distance for workers to travel, the committee pointed out that most industries in Marion draw workers from nearby counties. Although "compelling personal reasons" are recognized as grounds for a worker to change jobs, long travel to and from work can in some cases constitute a compelling personal reason, the committee hesitated to say where "reasonable" travel ends and where "unreasonable" travel begins.

The Bucyrus worker whose case was studied last night is William F. Graetz.

Rulings To Be Studied

Another matter before the committee was the effect new war manpower rulings from Washington might have on the Marion area plan. It was decided to postpone any study of this matter until after next Monday and Tuesday when war manpower and employment officials of northern Ohio meet in Marion for a two-day study of regulations. It is expected this meeting will clarify what changes might be necessary in the Marion area setup.

Frank L. White, president of the building trades council, asked whether construction workers would have to get a statement of availability before shifting from one job to another. He explained cement finishers, for example, often finish one job at 9 or 10 o'clock at night and wish to begin a new job at 8 a. m. the following morning, but might be unable to do so for lack of a statement of availability from their last employer. The committee answered it would make every effort to prevent the "bookkeeping" from interfering with any worker's opportunity to begin work, and promised a detailed answer at next meeting.

Galion Men Guests

Harold Link, vice president of the North Electric Co. at Galion, which operates a branch plant at Bucyrus, and Harold Burns, assistant secretary and treasurer of the company were guests. Mortality was added to the Marion area recently, and they attended to see how the committee worked.

Also a guest was W. L. Jensen, personnel service manager for the Firestone Rubber Co. at the Scioto Ordnance Plant.

AGREE ON CONTROL OF LABOR UNIONS

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., April 20—Rep. John Cattlett (R-Richland), chairman of a judiciary sub-committee named to draft a substitute for the French bill proposing regulations of labor unions, reported today the five-member group in substantial agreement on six major controls.

The committee at its first meeting last night decided labor unions were "connected with the public interest," Cattlett said, and agreed that any substitute bill should require unions to:

File annually with the state department of industrial relations copies of their constitution and by-laws, and a roster of officers kept up to date;

Furnish union members with detailed statements of receipts and disbursements, particularly all salaries, bonuses and expense accounts of officers;

Conduct officer elections annually by secret ballot;

Forbid contributions to political parties and candidates;

Require a cooling-off period before starting any strike, and Enable unions to sue or be sued.

measure. They said it was intended instead to snare the "big fellows" who operate the numbers games.

Labor Bill Up

The senate today took up the controversial female labor bill, which has been sidetracked since 13 Republican members rebelled against it March 17. Frank E. Whittemore, Republican floor leader, predicted it would be approved and sent to the house in substantially its present form.

The proposal establishes a maximum work week for women and minors, with provisions for war plants to exceed the maximum in emergencies. The present statutory maximum is 45 hours a week for factories and 48 for most other industries.

The senate completed action last night on three bills. They are:

Permitting old age pensioners to receive pay for casual work without losing their pensions;

Abolishing the payment of inheritance tax fees to probate judges and substituting a flat salary, and

Adding an osteopath to the state medical board and authorizing the board to license osteopaths.

President Tours U. S. Army Camps

clared he thought exactly the same thing now, after seeing the contrast.

Capital Still Behind

The people away from the national capital, he said, have a much better sense of proportion and perspective than those in Washington. He remarked he had not seen or heard of a single slacker. To a question whether he was "ready to perceive inspections for other people in Washington," he responded that he thought it would be an awfully good idea.

On his current travels, Mr. Roosevelt has schooled himself thoroughly on how Marines and soldiers are going sternly about the task of learning to kill, both in the air and on land, and on how the WAACS are training for more than a hundred different jobs so that even more men can be released to deal out the type of modern murder required by war.

In fact, at Fort Benning, Ga., which skims off the upper layer of enlisted men and prepares them for leadership, he attended several open-air classes for officer candidates.

At one of the classes, where a skull and crossbones sign proclaimed danger, he sat less than a hundred feet from the line of fire of machine guns and mortars spattering live and tracer ammunition into an "enemy" position in the wooded hills of west Georgia. The men were learning how to solve a battle indoctrination problem under conditions which more nearly approached actual combat than anything the Chief Executive had seen.

The emphasis was entirely on military might as Mr. Roosevelt's special train rolled in and out of the southeastern states. He visited no war production plants. He passed through or skirted cities and towns and the only crowds he saw were in khaki. He made no speeches.

Morale Booster

Morale undoubtedly got a boost, for wherever the Commander-in-Chief appeared, always unannounced, eyes lighted up and smiles appeared on thousands of faces. If there was any skimping on demonstrations of enthusiasm, apparently rigid discipline could be held responsible.

But at two stops the enthusiasm bubbled up into ringing cheers and unrestrained applause.

At the WAAC enter at Oglethorpe some of the newcomers just couldn't hold themselves in check. They shrieked and yelled and beat their hands together. And as the President left, after watching twenty-four companies of trainees pass in review, more of the girls, including some wearing military police arm bands, ran pell mell toward his car. But they couldn't keep up with its speed.

The next day, Palm Sunday, thousands of soldiers were off duty at Camp Joseph T. Robinson, Ark., and they and their officers cut loose at the top of their lungs as Mr. Roosevelt rode through the post. He attended church services with 3,400 of them in a tremendous field house, and when he waved to the boys afterward the din was ear-shattering.

The trip had no obvious political significance. The President did see five governors, but not for formal conferences. They simply appeared and rode with him at various places he visited.

They included Olin D. Johnston of South Carolina, Ellis Arnall of Georgia, Chauncey Sparks of Arkansas. The governors of Virginia and North Carolina were omitted because there were no inspections in their states.

The secret of this trip was not as well kept as that of the journey last fall. Rumors were flying all through the south, and at many posts officers and men said they had had a good idea of who was coming ahead of time.

People Line Route

People were clustered along the rail lines the President traveled, but they may have been attracted by the fact that soldiers were on guard all along the way, in some areas at intervals of only a hundred yards.

At every military establishment the Chief Executive saw, with the exception, of course, of the WAAC training center, big guns, tanks, rifles, and all the materiel necessary for combat operations were in evidence in profusion—down to pickaxe handles and galoshes.

He was asked about this wealth of materiel, as compared with what the nation started with, and he commented favorably upon it. Last fall there was enough for training, but peak production had not been achieved, he said.

While the troops looked snappier than they did last fall, Mr. Roosevelt said it should be remembered that he had been seeing more seasoned troops. He observed that in the last war troops went overseas and completed training there, but now they are about ready to fight when they leave this country.

The President spoke of the improvement in living conditions, in food, sanitation and housing and of how men would benefit permanently from their training in better health and mental alertness.

A year of military training does nobody any harm, he declared. On the average, he said, men put on about 10 pounds, take four inches off their waists and put an inch on their chests. Some even gain an inch in height.

Sees Stronger Race

It might also be said, he asserted, that between military training and rationing, we will have a stronger race of people.

Mr. Roosevelt mentioned the similarity in uniforms of officers and men, which he called an obvious precaution that should have been taken years ago, so that the leaders would not be picked off so easily under combat conditions. He observed, too, that the higher officers are much younger than they were in the last war.

The President said he had made no startling discoveries on his tour, but he said he had learned that the Marine Corps at Parris Island was getting a high percentage of recovery from neuropsychiatric cases which were put to work on a farm there had helped turn out 20 to 25 per cent of the vegetables and meat for the post.

When it was pointed out that he seemed to be concentrating on military installations, he asserted that the southeast was a region of relatively little industry.

He had passed up the Navy WAVES, he said, adding with a chuckle that the war department had arranged his trip and that he was afraid the WAACS were doing a lot of crowing.

TAX REPEALER STILL STALLED IN HOUSE

Committee Declines To Act on Bricker's Request.

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., April 20—Gov. Bricker's sales tax bill was still stalled in the house taxation committee today despite his request the measure by recommended for passage.

Furthermore, there was no official indication when, if ever, the committee would report out the measure removing the tax from food served in restaurants and from prescription medicines.

After the governor called in the committee's 19 Republican members late yesterday and insisted on action, an authoritative Republican said the committee's opposition to the bill apparently had not been altered.

Governor Bricker told the committee if the house of representatives did not care to lift the tax from food, he would be agreeable to removing it from other necessities such as clothing and shoes.

He qualified his statement, however, to say he would go along with removal of the tax from other items if the exemption did not reduce the state's revenue more than $5,000,000 a year. This is the amount by which state officials estimated, the food repealer could have cut revenues.

The governor took the position that while exemption of food from the sales tax would spread the benefits of tax reduction to the most people, they should be given the benefit of some tax reduction if the house did not prefer the food exemption.

Speaker William M. McCulloch after the conference with the governor yesterday expressed doubt the taxation committee would recommend the bill for passage unless the house Republicans reversed their stand.

It appeared unlikely the committee or the house Republican majority would take any formal action this week on the governor's request that the sales tax bill be brought out on the floor for a vote.

TWO MORROW CO. MEN WIN HONORS

Two Morrow county farmers have been honored by the Farmers' club of the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce for promoting certain phases of agriculture, The Associated Press in Cleveland reported today.

They are Edward McClarren, awarded a third prize merit certificate for reforestation work, and Richard M. Logan, given a second prize for experimentation. He devised a potato digger and other farm equipment.

Ted Cherrown of Ashland county and Elihu Beckman of Pike county won $100 first place awards. Self-sufficiency shown through his operation of a 50-acre farm won the award for Beckman. In addition to the cash awards, the first place winners will also receive plaques. All awards will be presented at the Farmers' club annual meeting in Cleveland Saturday.

Walter F. Pretzer, chairman of the awards committee, said nominations were made by county agents and winners were selected following an investigation of farms cited.

CLEVELANDER ABOARD DOOLITTLE CARRIER

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND, April 20 — The mother of a suburban Lakewood sailor said today her son told her an aircraft carrier was the "Shangri La" base from which Maj. Gen. Jimmie Doolittle's fliers attacked Tokyo, April 18, 1942.

(Shangri La, an imaginary place in Tibet in James Hilton's novel, "Lost Horizon," was the name President Roosevelt gave reporters as the taking-off place of the planes which carried out the Tokyo raid.)

Mrs. Julia Radulovich revealed her son, Aviation Machinist's Mate George Radulovich, 20, was a member of the carrier's crew and gave her the information when here on leave last December. She said he is now on the west coast.

Mrs. Radulovich related her son told her how the force of Billy Mitchell bombers took from a carrier 250 miles from Japan amid cheers of the ship's crew.

The mother also said her son informed her the task force escorting the aircraft carrier sank two Jap fishing boats and an enemy destroyer enroute to the point where the bombers took off. Mrs. Radulovich quoted her son as saying Maj. Gen. Doolittle was the first to take off and flew overhead until the bomber squadron assembled in formation and then headed for Japan.

Soldiers Keep Close Guard on Route Traveled by President's Special Train

By The Associated Press

Some sidelights on President Roosevelt's war inspection trip:

Soldiers guarded the rail lines the President traveled, giving special attention to bridges and grade crossings. Men in an amphibious jeep bobbed on the surface of the Tennessee river underneath one bridge.

At one point along the Atlantic seaboard, half a dozen Negro section hands were leaning on shovels, backs to the train, while a foreman apparently threatened serious consequences if they turned around for a look. "A gang of WPA workers," somebody quipped in the dining car.

Near Maxwell Field, Ala., three children, the oldest about 12, were on their way to school. The Army was taking no chances with any one and a soldier with rifle and bayonet conveyed them past the reservation.

* * *

Two dogs made the trip. One was Mr. Roosevelt's Scottie, Fala, which goes nearly everywhere he does; the other was an Irish setter, Sister, belonging to Miss Laura Delano, a cousin of the President.

Fala and "Sis" didn't like to hear big guns firing and barked back furiously.

Once an Army officer took Fala in tow and introduced him to some civilian employes at an air station, saying: "And this is Fala, the dog you've heard so much about."

* * *

Eleven-year-old Gene Edwards of Atlanta almost thumbed a ride on the Presidential special, but Frank R. Wilson, chief of the United States secret service, thought it would set a bad precedent.

Gene was with his dad, Mitchell Edwards, who was on a business trip through Warm Springs, Ga., when Mr. Roosevelt left there.

Mr. Edwards told the lad he could win a $100 war bond if he could get a ride to Atlanta on the special.

Gene put it up to White House officials, who sort of liked the idea, but Wilson saw some difficulties. He explained them to the disappointed boy, gave him a pamphlet on how to detect counterfeit money, brought him over for a close look at the President, and dad said probably Gene would get his bond, anyway.

Some of the WAACS at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., dashed out of their quarters for a look at the President wearing curlers in their hair.

The military police at Fort Oglethorpe held back Sergeant "Beenie" Nash, niece of the Chief Executive's military aid and secretary, Maj. Gen. E. M. Watson, but Miss Grace Tully of the secretarial staff got her through the lines.

"Well what do yo know," Mr. Roosevelt exclaimed as the sergeant came up to his car.

The weather man cheated 11,000 soldiers at Camp Joseph T. Robinson, Ark., out of attending church with the President. The services were scheduled for an amphitheater seating 15,000. When it rained in the morning, they were moved to a field half with a capacity of 3,400. It was clear by church time, but too late to shift back.

* * *

Rationing is a problem even on a Presidential train. A Baltimore & Ohio diner, which could carry supplies for only five days, made the whole trip and had to take along a stock of ration coupons so food could be picked up along the line.

HARMON RECOVERING AT ARMY AIR BASE

No Word Yet Of Other Members Of Airplane Crew.

By The Associated Press

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico, April 20—Lieut. Thomas Harmon, former All-American football player of the University of Michigan, was reported resting today at an army base in Paramaribo, Dutch Guiana, after surviving a U. S. bomber crash in a South American jungle, but five other members of the crew apparently were still missing.

Fliers searching the area of the accident reported three parachutes hanging from the branches of trees, advices from Paramaribo said. Harmon was quoted as saying he had seen the bodies of two flyers in the wreckage of the plane, which crashed near the village of Caux, French Guiana.

Harmon, one of two pilots on the bomber, was reported to have been picked up by Indians after days of wandering in the jungle in the vicinity of the wrecked plane—which carried his famous "90" number on its fuselage—and taken to Paramaribo.

President "Steals" 26 Hours To Visit Warm Springs, Ga.

By The Associated Press

WARM SPRINGS, Ga., April 18—(Delayed)—Interrupting his second wartime swing around the country, President Roosevelt spent a sentimental interlude today at "the Little White House" on Pine mountain and at an infantile paralysis foundation which he helped establish years ago.

After inspecting Fort Benning, near Columbus, Ga., yesterday, he came here for what he called a stolen 26 hours with the "Warm Springs family," with which he used to spend a week or two every spring and fall in peacetime.

Driving his own blue touring car with a Georgia tag inscribed "FDR 1," he looked over the foundation, saw the farm which he deeded to it, renewed acquaintances with old friends, traveled down to the golf course, had a dip in a pool fed by waters from which the town gets its name, and ended up with a glowing, pink face from long hours in the open.

He took time out at noon for a picnic lunch on a sunny hill top.

Mr. Roosevelt ate a turkey-and-trimmings dinner last night with the patients of the foundation, gave them a short, informal speech, and, in the tradition of former years, shook hands with all of them afterward because he said it would "do my heart good."

"I hope I can come back in the autumn," he said, "but that's no promise, for the very simple reason that I'm not the master of my own calendar."

He recalled his last brief trip to the foundation, a week before Pearl Harbor, when he had predicted that Americans might be fighting before another Thanksgiving day rolled around.

The morning he arrived, he said, he had had "one of those psychological things," a hunch, and had telephoned Secretary of State Hull in Washington he was worried, didn't know why, but felt he was too far away from the national capital.

Hull also was worried. Mr. Roosevelt said, so the next day he headed back to Washington and talked with the secretary. He said he told his cabinet officer:

"You know, I think we are all rather silly, but I had a feeling that something was hanging over our heads."

A week later, he said, came the unwarranted, surprise attack on Pearl Harbor.

Marine Training Viewed by President

By The Associated Press

PARRIS ISLAND, S. C., April 14—(Delayed) President Roosevelt, starting a second wartime inspection tour—this time military centers—saw today how the United States Marines toughen up awkward recruits and convert them into some of the world's most feared and famous fighting units.

Seated in an open car, with a Navy cape protecting him from a strong wind and a miniature sand storm, the Chief Executive drove through the Parris Island Marine corps training station, while the commanding officer, Maj. Gen. E. P. Moses, told him how it had been turning out 1,000 men a week since Pearl Harbor.

Thousands of boot camp recruits were drawn up in long, straight lines on a parade ground, and their commander-in-chief spoke to them briefly and with obvious pride after roaming over the entire post.

"Men," he said, "I congratulate you on being Marines. I have followed the Marine corps many, many years. It was just thirty years ago that I was here at Port Royal.

"I have seen you in Haiti, Santo Domingo and in France, and on the Rhine. Some of you younger men may not appreciate it, but I was not in the halls of Montezuma or on the shores of Tripoli.

"I congratulate you all on being here. You are a credit to the Marine corps, and I can't say more than that."

Another audience might have yelled itself hoarse, but not a muscle budged in the disciplined ranks.

Mr. Roosevelt left Washington by special train yesterday afternoon after dedicating a memorial to Thomas Jefferson. Through the night he sped down the Atlantic seaboard, where soldiers at 100-yard intervals guarded the route.

HITLER MARKS 54TH BIRTHDAY IN RETREAT

By The Associated Press

LONDON, April 20—Adolf Hitler celebrated his 54th birthday today with his armies on the defensive in Europe and its outposts, and little to tell the German people to relieve the grimness of the situation should he decide to make his usual anniversary address to the nation.

The Berlin radio pictured him as spending the eve of his birthday at headquarters listening to broadcasts that marked the beginning of Germany's annual tribute to the fuehrer.

The first broadcasts brought pronouncements of Propaganda Minister Goebbels and Reichsmarshal Goering from the microphones and it was a grim birthday theme they sounded for the nation.

"The war is in its fourth year and has reached its hardest stage so far, and the end or a way out of its burdens and suffering are at present nowhere in sight," Goebbels said.

"If the people must shoulder great risks to preserve their existence," he added, "it is better to ban the devil of doubt and discord and to concentrate steadfastly on a historical mission. If that begins to be found wanting, it is the beginning of the end."

Goering issued a proclamation to the army and the people hailing Hitler as "the first soldier of the reich."

Since Hitler's last birthday, Nazi troops have met a stunning reverse at Stalingrad, his Africa corps has been chased into a corner of Tunisia, and his industrial cities have received heavier and heavier pounding from allied air forces, with the Russian air arm renewing its assaults on his eastern border cities.

Ghost Voice Interrupts Radio Tribute To Hitler

By The Associated Press

LONDON, April 20—A powerful ghost voice interrupted the radio's birthday tribute to "our beloved fuehrer" today by shouting:

"The entire German nation curses today the hour that man was born."

"This henchman has been in power much too long. German people awake! The time has come to finish with the Nazi gang. Down with Hitler and his gang. On the day of Hitler's downfall, the war will be over."

The ghost was on the same wave length as the Berlin radio and the Nazis were unable to stifle the voice.

Visit Makes WAACS Forget Discipline

ABOARD ROOSEVELT TRAIN IN TENNESSEE, April 17—(Delayed) — President Roosevelt WAVE-d at the WAACS today and WOW-ed them.

He paid them an unadvertised call at the third women's army auxiliary corps training center at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., and some of the new trainees—even some of those wearing the arm bands of military police—forgot all about discipline as he started to leave the parade ground.

Across streets and lawns they rushed, with shrill feminine shrieks, trying to get up close.

"Wait until we tell our secret!" One of the khaki-clad lassies screamed.

"Gee," called another, "I got to touch the President's dog!"

Never before had Mr. Roosevelt inspected a WAAC center, and it was a decided novelty for him to hear military commands in soprano, and to see nearly 4,000 girls in smart summer uniforms stride briskly past him in a formal review.

The WAAC show rather took the edge off an inspection, later in the day, of the 30th infantry division, which is in the final stages of its training at Camp Forrest, near Tullahoma, Tenn. After all, the commander-in-chief had seen hundreds of thousands of men in uniform before.

Honor Roll Committee Asks Public Help in Correcting List of Names

Procedure To Follow in Reporting Corrections or Additions: Warns Against Defacing List.

has received a letter Marion County Honor ittee regarding the fronted by that group to correct the names unty service men on on the courthouse committee asks for the ublic in reporting cor- systematic manner.

of the committee are outh of Franklin street, Lewis Ashworth of Girard avenue and John F. Smith of Virginia avenue.

The text of the letter follows:

"The committee appointed to investigate errors and omissions on the Honor Roll of Marion county residents in the services of the United States, have devoted a great deal of attention to checking applications, which have been filed at the Victory House, giving information in regard to improper address and or initial. Many applicants advising of errors have not given sufficient information to enable the committee to check and verify the applications. Due to the fact there are now more than 5,000 residents of Marion county in service, you can readily understand the necessity of full information, as requested on the applications. Every application which has been filed will receive careful attention.

"In order to help the committee check these applications, it is necessary that proper location of a reported incorrect name, should be fully located on the application by showing the PANEL, COLUMN and LINE, also it is necessary that the name as appearing on the board be shown, as well as the correct name. With this complete information the committee will make every effort for confirmation of the action or error in establishing the correction of the name.

Numerous applications have been filed showing names not appearing on the roll. This is partially explained by the fact that no names have been added since the Honor Roll was erected in December, 1942. A complete list of persons entering the services since that time is in the hands of the committee and will be placed on the roll as soon as weather conditions are such that this may be done. However, some applications showing names not listed, is accounted for by the fact that some residents of Marion county had resided outside of the county at the time they entered the service and it has not been possible to verify all of such applications. The War Bond Committee, responsible for the erection of the Honor Roll, intend that all residents of Marion county who enter any branch of the services of the United States or their allies, shall be honored by having their names listed. All applications of this kind shall be fully checked and names added to the roll when they can be verified.

"It is the intention to list all Marion county women who enter the services and it is requested that any person having information regarding such women give complete information and leave it at the Victory House.

"It has been arranged that a Gold Star will be placed opposite the names of any persons who loose their lives while in the service and in order that this may be done, it is requested that the family of any such person furnish complete information and leave it at the Victory House."

"It is greatly regretted that the Honor Roll has been defaced in various ways. The War Bond Committee advises that legal action will be taken against any person found to have marked or defaced this roll in any way. It is hoped, in honor to those who are serving in any branch of the service, that we shall all take pride in this Honor Roll and do all possible to preserve and protect it.

"The Committee welcome your assistance and suggestions, and information may be left at the Victory House."

Court Declines To Act in Light Price Case

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, April 20—The supreme court yesterday dismissed an appeal from a decision which declined to direct the General Electric Co. of Schenectady, N. Y., and the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. of Bloomfield, N. J., to abolish a 23 per cent reduction in the retail price of the 40, 50 and 60-watt incandescent lamps.

Dismissal was ordered on the authority of previous supreme court decisions. There was no written opinion.

Seeking reinstatement of the higher prices, the Jewel Incandescent Lamp Co., Inc., of East Newark, N. J., contended the reduction was ordered "for the obvious purpose of driving the independent lamp manufacturers out of business and for the ultimate purpose, of subjecting the public, for years to come, to arbitrarily fixed high prices which thus would become possible by the complete elimination of all competition."

This is Easter Time...

Now millions of Americans reaffirm their faith in truth, justice and ...

But This Easter is Different . . .

If this were the Easter of other years, we would talk about the Easter Parade: new bonnets, smart dresses, trim suits, gay shoes, colorful handbags . . . spring outfits for every member of the family.

Of course we have all these things. But in assembling this Easter's wardrobes for American families everywhere, we kept in sight every moment, the wartime job the Home Front has to do.

Every Easter Outfit Has Become a Uniform!

THE HOME FRONT UNIFORM IS EVERYTHING YOU WEAR!

It is seen in many different styles and colors. It may be a dress or a pair of slacks and a sport shirt. It may be a skirt and blouse, or an overall, or a gabardine suit.

It is whatever kind and type of apparel is most comfortable and long-wearing . . . most fitting and becoming . . . most helpful and economical for the particular job you have to do.

THE HOME FRONT JOB IS EVERYWHERE!

In the church, in the school . . . in the factory and the shipyard . . . on the farm and the assembly line . . . in the store and the home.

THE HOME FRONT WORKER IS EVERYBODY!

Your son Joe . . . and your daughter Mary . . . your husband Sam . . . your neighbors Ann and Henry, and you, yourself!

FOR FORTY-ONE YEARS PENNEY STORES, FROM COAST TO COAST, HAVE BEEN OUTFITTING THRIFTY AMERICAN FAMILIES—JUST AS THEY ARE DOING TODAY!

The knowledge and the skill gained from our long experience of low-cost, neighborly storekeeping, stand America in good stead today.

For now, more than ever, Mr. Penney's original idea of "Not How Much Can I Get" but "How Much Can I Give" is proving its soundness and value. Your local Penney store sells hats and coats and dresses for you and your children. It sells shoes and hosiery and underwear for every member of your family. It sells slacks and sweaters and shirts for men and boys of all ages.

In fact, it sells every item of apparel you can think of, as well as sheets, blankets, yard goods, curtains and similar things for the home.

Altogether your Penney store is helping in many vital ways to quartermaster the Home Front.

Baseball Takes Over National Sports Scene Toda

Washington Senators Meet A's in Opener; Other Teams Start Playing Tomorrow.

Associated Press Sports Writer
By JUDSON BAILEY

NEW YORK, April 20—Weather permitting, the major leagues will take charge of the sports scene again today with a single game at Washington and then will let loose a full broadside tomorrow with all teams in action.

In spite of the pressure of war, baseball has managed to retain its hold on the interest of fans throughout the nation and will have its familiar opening day furbelows—parade officials throwing out the first balls, pennants being raised, march players and peanuts enough for everybody.

At Washington today a crowd of 27,000 was expected at Griffith stadium to see the Senators tackle the Philadelphia Athletics. Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt was selected to handle the opening pitch assignment with Luman Harris of the A's and Dutch Leonard of the Nationals taking over afterward.

Tomorrow Big Day

Tomorrow this scene will be re-enacted at other ball parks. In the American league the regular open day program calls for Washington at New York, Boston at Philadelphia, Detroit at Cleveland and Chicago at St. Louis. In the National league the world champion St. Louis Cardinals will invade Cincinnati, Pittsburgh will be at Chicago, New York at Brooklyn and Philadelphia at Boston.

The Yankees will raise their American league pennant at pregame ceremonies with League President William Harridge officiating and Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia will throw out the first ball.

Partly because of weather uncertainties and partly because many fans are too busy in midweek to get to the games, the attendance at opening day this year is likely to be less than in the past.

If all eight games get by the weather the total turnout probably will be in excess of 100,000, a decline of approximately 25,000 from last year. Only at Cincinnati, always a great first day center, is a sellout of 30,000 is expected.

A crowd of 30,000 also is predicted for New York's debut with Washington, but this is less than half the capacity of huge Yankee stadium. Ernie Bonham, the big right-handed ace of the Yanks, has been designated by Manager Joe McCarthy to pitch against Early Wynn of the Senators.

Dodgers Start Campaign

Another baseball show of considerable interest will be staged across town in Ebbets field, home of the Brooklyn Dodgers, who will be starting their pennant quest against the New York Giants. On the mound it will be Ed Head for the Dodgers and Bill Lohrman for the Giants.

The Cardinals and Yankees have been made favorites by the baseball writers to repeat their championships of last year, but all observers acknowledge that the outlook is more confusing this year than ever.

It was announced yesterday that Vander Meer has been placed in 1-A and with his departure will go a large share of the Reds' pennant chances. Although their rivals are certain to suffer similar blows along the way.

After playing tomorrow and Thursday, both leagues have arranged an open date on Good Friday and another off day on Monday. The "second openers," i. e., the first home games for the clubs opening on the road tomorrow, will be played next Tuesday.

COUNT FLEET LEAVES FOR DERBYVILLE. Count Fleet, Mrs. John D. Hertz's heavy favorite for the Kentucky Derby, leaves a horse van at Belmont Park, N. Tested seeds for planting wildlife food patches will again be furnished this spring by the Ohio division and natural resources.

In addition to a great many acres of division-owned land which was utilized, these wildlife cafeterias on privately owned Ohio farm land totaled 867 acres last year. Considering the fact that they are usually planted in very small strips this is a good acreage.

Conservation Commissioner Don Waters and game management officials are pointing out that although some land used in raising wildlife food in the past will now lend itself to victory garden plantings and other agricultural production, for the most part these areas are too small and too inaccessible for that use.

While these patches run from one-half to two and one-half acres sometimes they are usually in long strips, which aid in preventing soil erosion and eliminates the congregation of too much game in one spot.

Seeds provided are put up in units and include such items as corn, soybeans, sunflowers, millet, kaffir corn, buckwheat and sorgo. Left standing these patches furnish protection from the sun to wildlife, escape cover and food.

Some Ohio teacher is going to have an opportunity to attend the Conservation Laboratory at Ross-Hocking State Park, June 17 to July 23 on a free scholarship all because he or she took a conservation picture that appealed most to the judges.

The scholarship, contributed by Dr. Charles Holzer of Gallipolis, O., will go to the winner who must turn in the right picture on or before May 1. The special photograph should have a school building in the picture and at the same time show in a rather prominent way some conservation problem.

Entries should be sent to Ollie E. Fink, director of the laboratory, who is also curriculum superior of conservation education in the joint program of the Ohio Division of Conservation and the State department of Education. With these two state departments, the Ohio State university is also a joint sponsor of the laboratory, the "school in the forest."

Fish are bitin' and the sale of licenses indicates that many an Ohio angler already has indulged in some spring fishing this year.

Most fishermen have the habit of getting out the fishing tackle during the winter months, making sure that it is in good shape but perhaps some found their supplies a bit short. Others, perhaps, have had to have a rod or reel repaired.

All of which, because of repeated rumors afloat that tackle was mighty scarce, prompted the Ohio division of conservation and natural resources to find out the facts. The Ohio Conservation Bulletin, monthly publication of the division asked a number of hardware and sporting goods dealers the question "How is your fishing equipment supply" and the general answer was "pretty good."

Typical of some of the replies are these: "We have an ample supply for the coming season" . . . "most dealers in this section stocked up heavily last year and have a good carryover. Of course this does not mean that some items will not be out of stock . . . only where there may a heavy run on a certain bait or an extremely heavy sale of reels and rods, will stock become exhausted" . . . "we have bought a quantity that will probably last two years . . . we are looking forward to a good year even with the restrictions on travel" . . . "there is still a good stock of rods and reels . . . there is plenty of linen line, also low priced line and a fair amount of silk line and there seems to be no shortage in flylines . . . there is talk hooks may be hard to get but we are still offered hooks from a number of sources."

ATTENDANCE DROPS AT OHIO HIGH SCHOOL CAGE TOURNAMENTS

Decline of at Least 123,000 Reported in Figures for State.

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, April 20 — Attendance at Ohio's high school basketball tournaments — from the county through the state championships—took off at least 123,000 this year as compared to the 1941-42 "gate," Commissioner H. R. Townsend said today.

Attendance figures on the Cincinnati, Springfield and Dayton sectional-district meets, and the regionals at Dayton, are not yet available, but the deficit is expected to grow larger when the complete returns are in.

The county tournament attendance skidded from 255,484 in 1942 to 179,667 this season, a drop of 75,797. With five of the six districts reporting on sectional-district play, the attendance of 103,900 showed a loss of 41,792.

The state tournament finals, attracting 9,806 this year, dropped 8,742 under the 1942 figures, but the regional play came up with a slight gain. Last year the regionals drew 11,854, but with two tournaments still missing from the 1943 compilation (Dayton and Springfield) the total was up to 12,563, making the Springfield and Dayton figures all surplus.

Heaviest drop was in the southwestern district's county frays, which drew only 39,288 fans as compared with 67,786 a year ago —a loss of 28,498.

Townsend said travel difficulties, due to the rationing of gasoline and other restrictions, caused practically all the attendance loss. Despite the heavy attendance cut, however, the schoolboy cage tourneys drew 305,436 fans, with five tournaments still to be heard from.

BUCK SWIMMERS ELECT

COLUMBUS, O., April 20—Ohio State university's swimming team will be captained in 1943 by its Hawaiian sophomore star, Keo Nakama. Bill Smith, also of Hawaii, and Stan Praver of Flushing, N. Y., were among 22 on the squad to receive letter awards—the first freshmen to earn varsity "O's" in more than 20 years.

Vander Meer, M. McCormick Headed for Army but Reds Still Are Happy

By The Associated Press

CINCINNATI, April 20 — It may seem odd, with Johnny Vander Meer and Mike McCormick apparently headed for Uncle Sam's armed forces, but the front office of the Cincinnati Reds is optimistic about the forthcoming baseball season.

It's a sort of negative confidence along the lines of "we've got more of a ball club left than anybody else," but the graybeards may know what they're talking about.

General Manager Warren C. Giles puts it this way: "We've got a better team now than at any time last year, and that's more than anybody else can say."

His amanuensis, Traveling Secretary Gabe Paul, is more emphatic.

"Listen, boy," says Gabe, "We're going places this year."

Giles lists as assets Buddy Miller at shortstop, making third baseman Bert Haas a steadier player, and a fair fund of reserve strength, not to mention, of course, the famed Cincinnati pitching staff.

On the other hand, Giles admits that hitting prospects are not so hot. The team hit around .240 last year and Giles said nothing to indicate that he expected .250 this year.

"Expect," he added, "as (manager) Bill McKechnie says, 'No change could be for the worse.'"

Giles took heart from the two overtime games the Reds won from the Cleveland Indians over the week-end, 3-2 and 2-1.

"Last year we lost all the close ones," he said. "Now maybe we're starting to win them, like in 1940 when we got 40 or so one-run victories and a pennant."

Giles is not too worried about all the cancelled games of the spring tour. He figures that muscle magician Bill Miller got the boys into pretty good shape and that while the pitchers may be a little slow at the start, everything will be fine if the sun only shines Wednesday.

That's when the St. Louis Cardinals show up.

Gehringer Only Fooling About Quitting Baseball

LIEUT. GEHRINGER
Ex-Tiger Is Navy Coach

Associated Press Features

ST. MARY'S COLLEGE, Calif.—Lieut. Charles Gehringer may be "through with baseball for good," as he says, but you wouldn't know it to see him working with the Naval station nine here.

Charley is baseball coach for all the officers, enlisted men and cadets in this pre-flight school. Among the candidates who have had pro ball experience are Bill Rigney, shortstop from Oakland; Ray Perry, third baseman from San Francisco; Bill Wight, pitcher from Binghamton, N. Y.; Joe Smith, catcher from Oakland; and Rob Bergstrom, outfielder from Portland.

It is difficult to get Charley to tell any baseball anecdotes, or to compare players he has seen in the major leagues, but in a recent fanning bee, he was asked about Bobby Doerr of the Boston Red Sox and Joe Gordon of the Yankees.

"I wouldn't care to choose between them," declared Gehringer. "It's a toss. Gordon's style of infielding makes him look flashier than Doerr, but Bobby is a little more sure of his chances. Joe is the better distance hitter."

Charley said experience is a great teacher because one learns the habits of hitters and can play the percentages when he knows what kind of a throw the pitcher is going to make. "Knowing how to play the hitters enables the experienced infielder to be close enough to a ball that a rookie would miss by a foot or so," asserted Gehringer.

The Tiger star of 17 years volunteered a kind word for the umpires when one of his players pointed out that Charley had never been tossed out of a major league game, and apparently led a charmed life.

"If you are reasonable with the umps, they'll be reasonable with you," answered Gehringer. "They are honest and they rate the benefit of the doubt. In a lot of close plays at second, I didn't know myself whether or not the runner was out, so how could I expect the umpire always to know."

When the war is over, Charley plans to go back to Detroit in sales and engineering work. He owns his home there and lives with his mother, Mrs. Theresa Gehringer.

HEATH, DESAUTELS DOUBTFUL STARTERS, BOUDREAU REVEALS

Catcher Hurt and Manager Wants Left Fielder To Get a Little More Work.

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND, April 20 — Outfielder Jeff Heath and Catcher Gene DeSautels are doubtful starters for the Cleveland Indians in their American league opener with the Detroit Tigers here tomorrow.

Weather forced cancellation of yesterday's workout in the stadium and Manager Lou Boudreau said he probably would not start Heath.

"I would like to have had Jeff get some work under his belt. As it is, I probably will start him Wednesday," the Tribe pilot said.

Boudreau fears Heath might run the risk of a charley-horse, although he will have the big fellow available for emergency duty. If Heath doesn't start, Oris Hockett will be the left field replacement.

DeSautels was hit on the right wrist by a pitched ball in the exhibition game at Cincinnati Sunday. X-ray photos revealed no fracture and trainer Lefty Weisman is treating the injury.

If DeSautels is not ready Buddy Rosar, whom the Indians obtained in a trade with the New York Yankees, will catch Jim Bagby.

Tommy Bridges or Virgil Trucks probably will receive the Detroit mound assignment, although Manager Steve O'Neil won't commit himself.

Starting his third season with the Tribe, Bagby has a lifetime record of seven victories and six defeats against the Tigers. Last season, when he registered 17 wins while losing only nine, he beat the Tigers three times and lost only once.

Bagby didn't know his record against the Tigers, explaining, "I never look back at the records. They either beat me or they don't."

The Indians' management anticipates an opening day crowd of 35,000.

This Year's Derby First To Be Run on May 1

By The Associated Press

LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 20—The 69th Kentucky derby this year will be the first ever run on May 1.

Of the previous 68 derbies, 67 were run in May and one—that in 1901—was staged on April 29.

In the 1920's the classic race was run in mid-May, but so much rain and bad weather spoiled the event for spectators, that Churchill Downs decided to stage it earlier. Since 1931, the Kentucky derby has been an event of the first week of May.

The subjects of these discussion groups have not all been selected, but the plans call for discussing those topics considered to be of most vital importance and interest not only to the schools but to the community in general.

Canton Employes Vote To Strike Next Tuesday

By The Associated Press

CANTON, O., April 20—City street, water and garbage department employes affiliated with the CIO State, County and Municipal Workers of America have voted to strike a week from today unless they obtain a settlement of their demands for wage increases.

Anthony Vetrone, union field representative, announced the workers had unanimously voted for the strike after city council voted last night to grant the finance committee two more weeks to prepare a report on the union's request for pay raises to meet higher living costs. The original demand was for flat increases of 10 cents an hour.

Vetrone said the strike action was withheld for a week because the union planned to notify the U. S. labor department conciliation service of the dispute and to ask that a conciliator be sent here.

Allied Air Forces Do Magnificent Job in Tunisia

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

Today's magnificent job of ...spair work the Anglo-American air fleets are doing over northern Tunisia is proving the way to the final assault by the allied armies on the Continental defenders of the Axis in the small corner of Africa.

We should have a full, coherent picture of Tunisia today were it not for the tremendous opposition which is developing before bases, communications, supplies, reinforcements and reformations of the axis forces presently cooped up indefinitely inland, but by the rapidly growing strength of the United Nations air forces, Marshal Rommel likely would not be holding his own in the Libyan desert, far from the present predicament.

Alter Situation

Supremacy of the air over Africa has entirely altered the situation for the allies. A flash of what it means is seen in yesterday's statement by our General Carl Spaatz, allied air chief in the northwest Africa theater, who said our forces had shot down 518 axis planes since March 20 against a loss of 175, and had destroyed nearly 1,000 enemy planes on the ground.

In the few hours since Spaatz made that announcement his boys have added another string of planes shot down. A commander-in-Chief Eisenhower's headquarters stated today that allied planes had destroyed a two-day total of 112 axis machines, including 70 great transports.

Where it not for the allied air superiority, Rommel's position now would be fairly impregnable. He is sitting on a coastal plain inside a vast natural fortress. At his back is the Mediterranean, with the great ports of Bizerte and Tunis for bases. Protecting him on all other sides is a range of mountains which swings about him in a huge arc some 125 miles in length, from coast to coast.

Within this amphitheater near Tunis stood that great commercial city of antiquity, Carthage. And across the coastal plain were waged fierce battles until finally the proud city was destroyed by the Arabs under Hassan in 647 A. D.

The allied armies are standing outside that arc. The only way they can get at Rommel is to force their way through gaps in the mountains, or up the coastal road which runs through Enfidaville in front of General Montgomery's famous Eighth army.

Actually we probably shall see several allies forces driving at Tunis and Bizerte simultaneously through different valleys. However, that represents a difficult and costly job, for the enemy has fortified and heavily mined all routes. Through the mountains and as things now look will make a strong defense.

Forcing the mountain gaps is a task which must be done by infantry. The air can help, of course, by preventing supplies and reinforcements from reaching the axis defenders, but the axis defenses hidden among the natural concealments of the mountains aren't easy to reach with bombs. The ground forces will have to batter their way through.

Once the allied offensive is under way, our air-force will make it their business to keep the axis cut off from all reinforcements and supplies by sea or by air. Anglo-American warplanes also will try to render useless the numerous axis air fields which still exist on the coastal plain, and thus prevent enemy warplanes from getting at the attacking allied troops.

TO PREACH WEDNESDAY

Pitfalls of Love

By ADELL GARRISON

MY FATHER [illegible] when Adams [illegible] the door [illegible] to speak.

"Get in touch at once by [illegible] with Adams and [illegible] to this afternoon."

Adams nodded and went [illegible] into the other room.

"I want to speak to Dad as much as I do to the woman [illegible] ridiculous he knows [illegible] getting [illegible] Katharine."

"Do you probably suspect?" he said. "Has it occurred to [illegible] Katharine in spite [illegible] her how long [illegible] marriages will take?"

"Not long," I snapped [illegible]. "But probably [illegible] to like hers, but all Katharine's attention and affection are focused on Jack, she is so terribly [illegible] about him."

Offers a Confidence

I tried to make my voice and words an appeal to him to break his silence about Jack's whereabouts, and was sorely tempted to tell him that I already knew of Jack's return to the hideaway, having accidentally caught a glimpse of him there through a door.

Now my father's glance at me was coldly speculative.

"I [illegible] you [illegible] remember, I am relying on your honor just [illegible]."

"I will remember," I said humbly, and after a moment of silence he spoke again.

"I told you before," he said slowly, "that Jack had left the hideaway, but that I was reasonably sure he was safe, and I permitted you to relay that information to Katharine. But I did not tell you, principally because Jack [illegible] forbade it, that he returned to the hideaway the day after he left, because he could find sanctuary nowhere else. He has been there ever since busily at work on his experiment, aided by Professor Dowell, and he will remain there for an indefinite time to come."

Guesses Madge's Secret

"Oh, how wonderful!" I exclaimed trying to simulate surprise, but easily conscious that my father's eyes were regarding me with keen appraisal.

"This is no surprise to you, Margaret," he said. "How did you discover Jack's presence in the hideaway?"

I met his eyes steadily.

"I saw him through the crevice of a door when I was down at the hideaway with Carolyn," I said, "but no one else saw him, and as I thought you didn't wish me to know he was there, I said nothing about it to you or anyone else, save to admit to Dickey that he was right when he taxed me with having seen Jack."

"Then Katharine does not suspect?"

"No, indeed," I told him. "It has been very hard not to tell her, for that would ease her great terror for Jack.

Gives Permission

"You now have my permission to tell her," he said abruptly, "but make no promise to let her see Jack. However, I will try to arrange that as soon as I can, but I have no idea when it will be."

He rose from his chair then and put his hand on my shoulder.

"You have been very patient and long-suffering with me, my daughter," he said. "You deserve fuller confidence, and whenever possible I shall give it to you."

I reached my hand up and clasped his.

"I am not asking for it," I told him stoutly. "All I ask is to be a good soldier."

"You are that," he said, stooping to kiss me. "And now I am going into the other suite to catch up with some work and await the return of Adams with his report. Also, I know you will wish to lose no time in giving Katharine my message."

Cycles

THE Textbook nutritionists and vitaminists who have just learned a few elements of their subject are always very much worried about exactly how much of every chemical element everybody should get every meal of the day and every day of the year.

They overlook the fact that Nature has been taking care of this now for thousands of years, and while a few mistakes occur now and then, they are not nearly as frequent or as serious as the nutritionists believe.

In fact, it is likely that if an expert nutritionist weighed out food for every one of your meals, you would probably be worse off than you are now, leaving things to your own free choice and to Nature's operations.

Nature has cycles in the production of the chemicals that are utilized in our bodies. Many of these cycles we have worked out in considerable detail and they are of fascinating complexity. For instance, we all need oxygen and nitrogen. Let us follow the nitrogen cycle, as explained by Dr. Fritz Kahn in his fascinating newly-published work, Man in Structure and Function.

All parts of nature need nitrogen for growth. "Fundamentally life is a reciprocal robbery of nitrogen." Plants are the ultimate source of nitrogen for animals. Some animals live exclusively on plants. But man eats the flesh of those animals and obtains nitrogen in that way. Of course, he also obtains it from plants, since he is omnivorous.

How do plants get their nitrogen? Plants living in soil in which there is no nitrogen starve to death. Plants remove enormous quantities of nitrogen from the soil. Wheat in a field, according to Kahn, of two and one-half acres removes about 400 pounds of nitrogen from the soil every year.

Nitrogen in the air is to some extent washed back into the soil by rain.

There is a nitrogen equilibrium in nature, although just how it operated was not exactly understood until the last few decades. Farmers have always known that land which has become poor can be enriched by the growth of any leguminous crop. Scientists discovered that legumes, such as beans, had small nodules on their roots and these nodules were actually made up of nitrogen-fixing bacteria. These bacteria can transform atmospheric nitrogen into nitrates. Many soils also contain free nitrogen-fixing bacteria which can transform the nitrogen of the air into soil nitrogen.

The ocean also contains nitrogen-loving bacteria, which, however, split up nitrates which are absorbed by plankton. The fish consume plankton and therefore get their nitrogen and when man consumes fish, he gets nitrogen. When the water of the ocean forms vapors, which condense into clouds, and the clouds float over the land, the rain again brings the ocean nitrogen to the land.

Thus, entirely beyond any planning, plants and animals are in nitrogen equilibrium. Of course, the scientific farmer who wishes a luxurious and special crop will have to employ somewhat artificial methods of impregnating the soil with nitrogen, but this is also the age-old dodge of fertilization.

The Stars Say—

For Wednesday, April 21

Matters of major importance continue at high pressure, with all the forces and faculties keyed to high tempo. It should be a time for reaching, with confidence and determination, in almost any channel. However it would be well to be cautious with all writings, legal documents and contracts, as well as travel and change. Beware misrepresentations and deceits and there should be expansion, with much happiness in domestic life.

Those whose birthday it is may be on the eve of a year of much growth and expansion. There should be definite and decisive concentration of forces toward securing cherished goals in business. Be prudent and conventional, not erratic.

A child born on this day should have great creative ability and energy in many fields of expression, with resourcefulness and force for attaining its ends, with a happy, esteemed and effective life.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

Fighter Plane Equipment

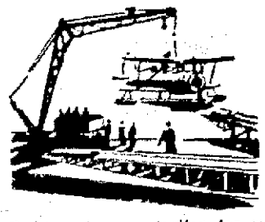
When a fighting fighter plane catapults from the deck of an American cruiser or other War Ship, it is evidence that your War Bonds have borne fruit in providing the necessary equipment. Catapult equipment for a cruiser costs $27,000.



Fighter plane protection for our Navy is essential in modern warfare. Our Navy heroes must have this protection. We can help give it to them by our purchase of War Bonds and other Government Securities. "They give their lives—You lend your money."
